The future of work 4.0, Disruptive technologies, opportunity or threat?
Wednesday 2 May 2018

Dr Charles Barthold

Lecturer in People Management, The Open University Business School

Dr Charles Barthold completed a Masters in Philosophy at the University of Paris-Panthéon-Sorbonne (2006-2008) and a Masters in Social Sciences at Sciences-po Paris (2007-2009). Then, he was awarded a Graduate Teaching Assistantship at the School of Management of the University of Leicester. This allowed him to complete a PHD without corrections (2010-2015). He was a lecturer at Kingston University (2015-2017). His papers have been accepted by the British Academy of Management, the European Group for Organizational Studies (EGOS) and Critical Management Studies among others.

Charles' research interests lie in the intersection of financialisation and political and ethical responses to it.